

PSYC 101 and 201 students

Psychology pool students will receive one (1) credit point for each hour of participation up to a maximum of three (3) credit points. No monetary compensation will be paid to Psychology Pool students. Psychology pool students will be awarded course credit in accordance with the course policy outlined by the instructor, upon completion of the experiment. If the student does not complete the experiment, they will be awarded credit based on the duration of participation, in accordance with the course policy. As an alternative to participating in a study for course credit, psychology pool students may write a brief report on an article from a psychology journal, approved by the psychology pool coordinator (Dr. May Awaida), in accordance with course policy. Psychology pool students are advised to contact the course coordinator if they wish to know more about this option.

Potential risks and benefits

There are no risks associated with participation in this experiment, aside from potential boredom arising from the repetitive nature of the task. There are no personal benefits to you from your participation in the study. The knowledge gained may be beneficial in broader contexts, for instance in the development of methods to improve word recognition and object recognition in general.

Withdrawal from the project

Your participation in this study is completely voluntary. You may refuse to participate in this study, and you may withdraw your consent to participate at any point in the study, at no penalty to yourself, no loss of benefits to which you are otherwise entitled, and no impact on your relationship with AUB.

Confidentiality

Your name and contact details will be recorded and kept confidential. Only the principal investigator and research assistant will have access to your personal data. The data from the experiment will be stored on a password-protected computer in the laboratory and in the office of the principal investigator for a period of seven years. No personal details will be published. All records from this study will be monitored and may be audited by the IRB while assuring participant confidentiality.
